A Letter on the Causes and Dispositions of the French Government, including a view of the Taxation of the French Empire, by an American recently returned from Europe.

A L S O,

The Parents Assistant, or Series of Catechisms, drawn by Maria Edgeworth.

January 10.

Sir,

Intoxicated by prosperity, corrupted by power, a venal parliament and rapacious ministry forced the country into rebellion, and into the arms of France, and the empire was rent in twain. The bulwark against French domination reared by the wisdom of sages, and cemented with the blood of heroes tottered to its foundations. The out-works of the great fortress of human liberty were dismantled, the citadel alone was left; it was left in the stout hearts and free institutions of the people of these states—pes altera gentium—the germ of future resistance—to that aspiring dominion through whose aid our independence had been established. It was reserved for the sagacity of Washington to discern through the honest prejudices of that glorious revolution which has immortalized his name, in spite of the animosities engendered during a long and cruel civil war, that it could never be the interest of the United States to swell the power of France, even by destroying that of a jealous and powerful maritime rival. But Washington was a soldier and a statesman:—his policy was enlarged and liberal; it looked to security; to great and permanent consequences: it was not the paltry make-shift of the day.—In earlier life he had borne arms to repel the encroachments of France on our western frontier: he justly abhorred the jackalls of a French despot, clothed in the fleece of republicanism, who, to suit their own wicked ends would fain represent that he was then a slave; and he equally pitied the folly of those who could be deluded by so barefaced a cheat. He knew that he had fought for liberty and his country, in both the wars in which he was engaged: and although he detested the corruptions of the British government and opposed them at the hazard of his life and fortune, he well knew how to estimate the

Washington, I have said, was a soldier and a statesman—bred in camps and academies in the great school of mankind. To the misfortune of his country, he was succeeded by two gentlemen of the bar, a profession of which it has been justly remarked, that it has a greater tendency to whet the ingenuity, than to liberalize the understanding or to enlarge the heart. One of them at a very late period of his life having served an apprenticeship to the trade of a courier at St. James, returned (whatever he may now pretend, while striving to recommend his son to office) a rank Englishman. Weak minds receive their opinions at second hand, great ones impose them. His successor, having made his début on the theatre of the great world at the court of Versailles, came home, in due season, in dress, taste, politics, philosophy and religion; in short, in every thing but the polish of his manners, a finished Frenchman. Accordingly we find that Porcupine flourished under the reign of the one, and Duane under that of the other. Mr. Adams would no doubt readily shift off Porcupine, or his answer to the address of the Bath county militia, or any other of his infamous retinuers, or ridiculous and wicked acts on the political estate of your deceased friend, general Hamilton. Do not forget, I pray you, sir, that you yourself were one of the faction, whom that impotent garrulous dotard, threatened to humble in dust and ashes; that faction made you secretary of state, and by consequence president. Discard, I beseech you, sir, from your countenance and counsel forever, either John, “a prating scribbling pair.” Both father and son have no other object but to sell their political “notions” in any market they can find. This Russian embassy has too much the appearance of a reward for apostasy. It looks to something like an up-and-down mission to the great emperor, through the little one.

I have said, sir, that I had found more to approve than I had expected in the course of your administration. Amongst others, however of this description, I cannot reckon the appointment to the first place under your government, of a man, notoriously incompetent to the discharge of its duties; whose ignorance of the marine department, on which he hung for 8 years, could be equalled only by the profusion with which he outstripped the legal appropriations for its service: A man who received the salary of secretary of the navy, whilst the business of the department was conducted after a fashion by his chief clerk. But the manner of his appointment to his present office, the first act of your administration—is calculated to wound the feelings of every independent American.—They feel themselves insulted in the person of their chief magistrate, when they hear the insolent boast, that you were dictated to on that occasion. Neither, sir, can I approve the appointment to the second military command in our country, of the head that contrived and the hand that executed the great master fraud of the Yazoo; of a man who rolls in princely wealth the fruits of that stupendous corruption. I say nothing of Wilkinson. He is in the last stage of putrefaction; touch him, and he falls to pieces. Nor is it credible, sir, to the American government that it should be represented even at the court of France, by the imputed author of the celebrated anonymous letters published at Newburgh at the close of the war, inviting the army to turn their swords upon their country. As long as the dread father of that army and that country lived; as long as the beams of his glory irradiated the land of his birth; this recreant, unworthy to be called his fellow-soldier, sought shelter in obscurity & darkness: but when the sun of our country's glory had descended below the horizon; in the political twilight that foretold the darkness of the night to come; this speculative parricide, (with many an obscene animal that shuns the day) crept forth from his hiding place. This minion of France who (from his insolent pamphlet in mockery of the distress of the American merchants robbed under color of the Louisiana convention) appears to have studied his art of love, as well as his politics, in the school of Cambaceres,* is unworthy to be your representative. Let him be turned out of the sty of sensuality in whose "vile mire he now wallows." Ship Wilkinson (if he will bear the sea sweat) to his friends in Cuba. Send Wade Hampton back to his cotton gins and tan-vats. Let him enjoy if he can under the tenure by which he holds it, his miserable wealth; or let him, "riven and blasted by the lightning of eloquence," pay to the offended majesty of virtue the dread homage of his remorse. Strip, sir, the epauletts of an American officer from shoulders branded by the scourge of the public executioner. Fear the cockade from the hat of every scoundrel in the army, if you can find honest men to accept their commissions. Suffer no man holding an office under you, to abuse it, by any attempt to influence the freedom of elections. Let not the government labor under the odium of supporting notorious swindlers and blacklegs, against men of the fairest character and pretensions; against men of honor and of science; against the orphan sons of heroes who sealed their attachment to their country with their blood; whose children, in gratitude for their fathers services, have been educated at the public charge. I know, sir, that you have a difficult part to act. The rejection of the treaty negotiated by Messrs. Monroe and Pinkney, and more especially the manner of that rejection, has greatly enhanced the difficulty of an accommodation of our differences with England. The pride of the two governments, and of the two countries has been roused: But it is essential, to the interests and (I might add) the existence of both, that they remain at peace. Far be it from me to palliate, much less to justify the misconduct of the British ministry; but let me remind you, sir, that the senti-

• The American reader may form some idea of the state of society in Paris, when he is told that the prince arch-chancellor of the empire, the duke of Pajma of the present day, is so notoriously addicted to unnatural busts, that a pretty youth, who frequented the Thuilleries a few years ago, was well known throughout Paris, as Madame Chambacere. Nor is this odious propensity confined to this grand dignitary of the imperial court alone. The theatres and public walks swarm with male prostitutes plying for custom; soliciting their own sex to the commission of that crime—not to be named among christians; for which Sodom and Gomorrah were destroyed by fire from heaven. O! for the pen of a Juvenal, or Sam Johnson!

The above is related upon the faith of as respectable a gentleman as any in the United States.

quired in that country by the restoration was confined to the king and his ministers, and the vultures that prey on the vitals of every state ; and that it is our interest that it should not be transfused (as assuredly it must be if we take part with France against whom they are combining for their very existence) into the breast of every true Englishman. Whilst we were fighting for our own liberties we had the good wishes of the majority of the English nation ; but the case is changed when their own existence is at stake.

You are advanced in life, sir, and you are childless. An honorable fame courts your acceptance. The interest of your country coincides with the ease of your administration. The people look in vain into the correspondence of Mr. Jackson for the outrage which he is alledged to have committed on the dignity of their government. They will support you in every proper exertion of spirit. They have been equally disgusted with the rashness of one, and with the meanness of another of your predecessors: but they will not be driven by their most honest prejudices, into the arms of France, whose touch is pollution and whose embrace is death. Your minister of finance has told you, that (avasion out of the question) war is impossible. This extraordinary man although "fallen from his high estate;" although he has lent his transcendent abilities to the arbitrary and unconstitutional acts of the late reign, and to the insidious and covert attack made at the last session of Congress on the sinking fund, that best hope of the nation—is yet "not less than archangel ruined." He is indeed no longer, "the apostle of truth and the favorite votary of liberty," immortalized by the pen of Curtius—"Quantum mutatus ab illo"—but he is yet an intelligent if not a virtuous statesman; versed in expedients and wiles, and upon him you must rely for whatsoever of wisdom and ability you may look for in the counsels of your cabinet. For: "when the waters are out, and the file affords no precedent," you will turn your eyes in vain, towards the Giles's and the Smiths, and the Varnums, and that whole tribe of ignorance, imbecility and impudence, whom the first swell of the great stream of public opinion will sweep back into their native insignificance, never to rise again.

Such is the infatuated predelection of many of our leading Republicans, who give the tone to public sentiment, for despotic France, and so strong the honest revolutionary antipathies of our people against Great Britain; so fortified, too, by a just sense of recent wrong from that proud and haughty nation; that I am prepared to be represented by our demagogues, and to be considered by many of the honest, unsuspecting dupes of these impostors, as the partisan of England rather than than the friend of my native country. No man is more sensible than myself of the violence, injustice, and folly of her government; but I consider the existence of my country (at least all that can render a country dear to a free man) to rest upon her independence. She is now paying the price of her own sins: her corruption and tyranny produced the American revolution, the immediate cause of that of France, from which, again, the present gigantic power of Bonaparte has sprung. Her prosecutions and oppressions have driven from their country thousands of the brave inhabitants of Ireland, in each of whom she has made a deadly enemy. Not only is the continent of Europe united against her; in the other hemisphere she has converted 6 millions of her own progeny into determined foes. Nothing is farther from my wish than to produce a rupture with France: such an event could be productive of no possible good. It is the interest of the U. States to be at peace with all nations, but with England more especially. We have the same interest in her preservation against France, now, that we had twelve years ago, in the preservation of France against the combined powers. But our interest (it may be said) is contingent and remote; that of England immediate and certain; and if she will not look to her own safety, but will force us into a war, it ill becomes us to yield to considerations, to which, although of ten-fold weight in her case, she pays no regard. In any ordinary case this view of the subject, which has often pressed itself upon me, would have great weight. But because her councils are ruled by infatuation and insanity; because every thing like political sagacity, or even common sense, seems to have been buried with her two great rival statesmen, I will not therefore disregard considerations which involve the very existence of my country. Besides this; I put it to your candor, whether the crooked and insidious policy of your predecessor was not calculated to give England (with all her faults) good ground to believe that while we did

"I am sure that might be considered as a compliment; it will like to see her, she will get a sample of humanity, and its desecration of her dearest friend in ferocious rumormongering. I have myself seen some of the Spanish nobles themselves in the husband their stepdaughters because one of them was a girl, and the other a man! Even the Minor, although monarch, refused leading their army against the party. Sir, that a general and political leader deceived by the press and commercial dictators of Europe both at home and abroad well acquainted resources; with the government; and with the power French army, our situation no party shall have the sea." In that transaction in whatsoever light I view it, I can find no matter for public congratulation. In its origin, its conduct and its consequences all is base, humiliating and revolting. To crush a single miscreant the constitution is heaved from its very foundation: Pelos is heaped upon Ossa; the rights of every man in society are invaded, and yet the criminal escapes! But enough and more than enough of this miserable wretch.

Although the public expectation has not been gratified by your administration, yet you have hitherto done nothing which may not be retrieved. Lay aside the involved, ambiguous style in which your predecessor has deemed it expedient to clothe his dark designs. "Tacitus" (it has been well remarked) "some where observes of Tiberius, that his speeches in the Senate, by the involutions of the style, at once betrayed the character of their author; and seemed to shadow out the picture of his cautious, dark and crooked polity." Come forward to the nation, and in plain and manly language, such as they can understand without the aid of a commentary, exercise the functions devolved upon you by the constitution. Neither shrink from the responsibility with which it invests you, nor degrade your high office by paltry intrigues with the legislature. Give us your naked unbiassed opinion on the state of our affairs. Tell us honestly what we have to expect. Do your duty, and be it at their own peril if congress fail in theirs.

If it be necessary to express an opinion of the conduct of the court of St. James's, or its ambassador, let it not be done in the language of the court of St. Giles's. Above all save us from the fangs of France. Leave us not to curse revolution itself; for which we shall have paid too dear a price, if we purchase a few years of independence at the expense of an age, perhaps an eternity of bondage. Can you anticipate for your country and for the world, the dark and horrid night of despotism which succeeded to the usurpation of Octavianus, and not sick-en at the prospect? When the wretched victim could find no refuge within the haunts of civilized man from his oppressor!
When the human mind sunk under the narcotic power of despotism!

The observations which I have deemed it my duty to submit to you, and thro' you to the public, have been hastily thrown together under circumstances not the most propitious to successful composition. I write —or dictate rather (for without the aid of an amanuensis I should be unable to address you) under the pressure of disease, when the operations of the mind are, of necessity, slow and painful; and I am not unconscious of that obscurity and feebleness, which in my present situation I am unable to remedy.
Under other circumstances, I flatter myself, this address would have been less unworthy of your attention. I write, however, neither to acquire fame, nor to gratify spleen; but to serve my country. I am prepared for imputations of foreign partialities and attachments. Every honest man, who in 1798, attempted to arrest the mad career of our political Malvolio, was stig-matized as the adherent of France; and I hope sir that you had the honor to be of the number. On this subject of foreign partialities, permit me to conclude in the words of a treatise, which I earnestly recommend to your most serious attention. I "shall be called" tory and friend of Great Britain, I "suppose, for expressing these sentiments.
This is to me a matter of perfect indifference. I do my duty in making public the facts and impressions to which I think it of importance that the attention of the country should be directed; and am too much occupied with the honest anxiety excited by these statements, even to be conscious of the contempt with which, at another time, I might treat such insinuations."

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 1.

Translated from Spanish papers.

Amongst the many vexatious insults which the conquered provinces are obliged to submit to from the tyrant monarch who calls himself a philosopher and boasts of his humanity, may be enumerated the following decree just issued by Kellerman, the French general.

Considering that it is necessary to augment the resources and means of increasing his imperial majesty's cavalry, and to cut off from the rebels and thieves the means of procuring horses, for their incursions—we order, that all horses male and female, belonging to the inhabitants of the provinces composing La Espagna Superior, viz.
Salamanca, Tamora, Toro, Leon, Valladolid, Valencia, Burgos, Soria, Santander, Vizcaya, Guipuzcoa and Alava, of the height of four feet four inches, or five feet and half an inch, Castilian measure, or above, be put in requisition for the use of the French army, and shall be brought to the capital of each department to be received and deposited. The governors of each province shall carry this decree into execution, and remit me a statement thereof.— Every horse under 5 1-2 feet, and all mares 3 months, with foal, and horses 30 months old, shall be made blind of the left eye, so that they may be rendered useless for the service by the owners. Defaulters herein shall be punished by a fine of four times the value of the animal. The execution of this decree is entrusted to the governors, commandants of arms, the commandants of all detachments and flying columns.

Charles Simms,
Thomas Swann,
R. Harrison,

For Sale, The following VALUABLE PROPERTY. A TRACT OF LAND,

CONTAINING 1600 acres, more or less, called and known by the name of Buffalo Marsh, lying within 12 miles of Winchester, in the county of Frederick, in the state of Virginia. On about 900 acres of this tract there are several very well improved farms tenanted for life or lives, the balance free of all incumbrance, including an excellent merchant mill built with stone, the whole yielding an annual rent of about 800 dollars. Much of this tract is very fertile, well watered, and all abundance of timber. It is generally rolling, but part of it is hilly and stoney, chiefly of lime stone. It will be laid off to suit purchasers.

Another tract, called Hollis's Marsh, lying in the county of Westmoreland containing about 2800 acres, bordering on the river Potomac, adjoining the Strasford estate, and the late residence of Richard Lee, esq. of Chantilly. On the estate are a number of farms and tenants at will. Part of this land is extremely fertile, and all of it as good as the lands generally are in that part of the country. The Marsh affords excellent range for stock, and is happily situated for fish and fowls of which that river abounds, and must be a desirable estate to any person who may choose to reside in that part of the country. It will however be laid off to suit purchasers.

The above lands are held by deeds of purchase duly recorded in the general court, Another tract containing 992 acres, lying in the county of Berkeley, adjoining the residence of Raleigh Colston, esq. of which about 660 acres is leased for the balance of the life of an aged man, the rest tenanted at will. This land is situate in what is called the big bend of Potomac, and borders on it. In point of fertility it is esteemed inferior to none in that part of the state and is held by deed from James Marshall, esq.

Seven other tracts containing 1000 acres each, adjoining each other in the county of Mason, within a few miles of the Ohio, between the two Kanawha's on the waters of Sandy Creek, which runs through a considerable part of it. It adjoins the lands of general Washington, and the late Benjamin Harrison, jun. esq. A large portion of it is rich bottom and the upland of very good quality. It is held under the original patent by deeds duly recorded in the general court.

Five full & complete Shares in the Dismal Swamp Company.

Upwards of 16,000 acres of Lands, being very old military rights, lying in the states of Ohio, Kentucky and the Indiana territory, chiefly patented in my own name and ready to be shewn.

A more particular description of the foregoing property may be seen by applying to Mr. Thomas Taylor, of Richmond, who is authorized to make contracts, or to myself in Alexandria. The titles are all undoubted and the terms proposed are, one fourth in cash at the time of conveyance, the balance in three instalments, the last two to be on interest from the date. Any species of the public stock and of the different Banks in the United States of Insurance Companies—of the Potomac Bridge and Turnpike Companies will be received in payment according to their fair value. Ground rents in the city of Richmond and town of Alexandria, or Houses and Lots, will likewise be received in payment according to such rates as may be agreed upon.

Linkerton's Collection of Voyages and Travels,

Forming a complete History of the Origin and Progress of Discovery by Sea and Land, from the most authentic Sources.

THE first number of this valuable Work is just come to hand and is ready for inspection at the store of the subscriber, in King street, and with Mr. Tripket, at the coffee-house.

Fully aware of the impositions that have been practised upon the public by strangers soliciting subscriptions from distant places; the Editors invite their examination of a Work perhaps the most useful, entertaining as well as extensive in its kind that has ever been undertaken in any country. And they flatter themselves that the American will by no means shrink from a comparison with the London edition, tho' offered at six dollars per Vol. less.

This number may be considered as a fair specimen of the execution of the work, and will be left a short time for examination before the 2d number is put to press. After this the subscription will be raised to $2 25 each number; and but a few more copies printed than are sufficient to supply the subscribers, that the early patrons of this valuable Work may have a decided advantage—subsequent applications may therefore come too late.

It is also the intention of the Editor to annex to the last number a complete list of names of the subscribers, as the patrons and encouragers of useful knowledge, the arts and literature of the United States.

Subscriptions are received by the subscriber.

WAS committed to the jail of this county as a runaway, a negro man who calls himself JOHN GELAT, and says he is the property of Mr. Edward Ambler, of Jamestown, Virginia—he is about 40 years of age, five feet eight inches high, had on a jacket and pantaloons of negro green cotton, and an old brown cloak; he had two horses with him, which he was offering for sale. The owner is requested to come and prove his property, pay charges, and take him away, otherwise he will be disposed of as the law directs.

TO BE RENTED,

For one or more years,
THAT valuable property commonly called Jones's Point, now occupied by Josiah Browning—Also, the Marsh and Hill adjacent. The terms will be made known by Dr. Stephen Cooke, near Leesburgh, London's county.

The subscribers having been informed that JOSEPH BROWNING has committed various depredations on the point, that he has sold the stone which surrounded it and the soil itself, gives notice to those who have been engaged in this honorable traffic, that a repetition of it will inevitably subject them to the penalties of the law.

John R. Cooke.
